

Mandel is force for local good

Highland Park/ Steve Mandel has been a consistent force for good in our community. During his prolonged service for the City of Highland Park he has often spoken for the disenfranchised, the minority, and the environment.

Steve was born and raised in Highland Park and feels an affinity for the community, the culture and the history of our city. Over the years Steve has represented orphan causes that were both important and necessary but often overlooked because the subtle political and social importance of their impact was not apparent. Steve has always shown personal interest in his constituencies' individual concerns.

A vote for Steve insures that his kind of compassionate support will remain in our political structure.

Sylvia Samuels Delman

Mandel possesses leadership skills

Highland Park/ Please join me in supporting Councilman Steve Mandel for re-election to the City Council.

Last year myself and other neighbors contacted the City Council concerning a proposed construction of a home in the floodplain that could threaten the welfare of our neighborhood. The neighborhood strongly opposed a waiver needed from the City to construct a new home along the Skokie River.

Steve Mandel immediately took a strong leadership role in protecting the floodplain from development in opposing this waiver. Now because of Steve's leadership and the City Council's concurrence, the neighbors are not threatened by the displaced floodwater this project could have spilled on adjoining properties.

Steve's commitment to the environment and accessibility to citizens is at the top of the list. Please join me in voting for Steve Mandel April 5.

Brian Warshawsky